A Great Hands-On-Workshop Planned for October's Meeting!

Matt Overton and Bryan Richardson have a vision- bring some of our best turners into the Bucks Wood Shop and let them show their stuff up-close and personal- so personal that you can try it yourself if you come to the October 20th meeting.

The meeting will host Mike Kehs and John Williams using pyrography to texture pieces, Joyce McCullough airbrushing vessels, while Bud Hohlfeld will show you the basics of boxes, Bryan will demonstrate coring and Ed Ryan show the basics of bowl turning. The amazing thing is that all of these will go on at once and you will be invited to get your hands on the tools.

As Matt says in his blog, this is a great way to improve your skills, learn about the Spring HOW workshops, and recruit new members. So if you know someone interested in turning or a member who hasn't been around for a while, invite them to the meeting on October 10th.

September's Show and Tell

We had a good turnout this at month's meeting and a great Show and Tell.

One of my favorites of the night was Tom Gall's work. Tom let us in on his never-give-up approach to turning: while making the natural edge vessel, despite a number of cracks, mess-ups and misfortunes, he persevered and ended up with a great piece. Paraphrasing one of our members- sometimes a piece of wood just isn't meant for the fireplace. Tom also shared his fondness for Stephen Hogbin (ten style points for that) and his Hogbin-style vessel. And if that wasn't enough, Tom also showed a great Nick Agar inspired bowl. This bowl was

Pollyanna Music Boxes

Matt Overton has announced that Music Boxes will be the Pollyanna theme for this year's holiday party in December. You can pick up the music movement at the October meeting. The way it works is that you make a box, bring it to the December meeting and it will be randomly exchanged with another maker. Remember that you have to make one to get one!
